

REMARKS

The claims have been amended to revise the scope of the tailoring information from that recited in the claims as finally rejected. The tailoring information is now recited, inter alia, as defining if the transfer of electronic content can occur between a first and a second terminal device or a further terminal device and between a first terminal device and a third terminal device. Also, new claims define the tailoring information specifying a number of times the tailoring information can be transferred between a first terminal device and other terminal devices.

An early action on the merits is respectfully requested.
